TEXT BOOKS.

Lippincott's Readers. Swinton's Spellers. Swinton's Grammars. Harper's Geographies. Hutchison's and Brands' Physiologies. Higginson's Young Folks History of the U. S. Harper's Arithmetics. Colburn's Arithmetic. Harper's Copy books. Normal Music Reader.

Beginning with April, 1881, the number of children reported by the Selectmen, between the ages of five and fifteen, has been as follows:

April, 1881,	196
April, 1882,	191
April, 1883,	171
April, 1884,	193
April, 1885,	192
April, 1886,	206
April, 1887,	211
April, 1888,	224
April, 1889,	237

These figures are given to correct the statement so frequently made that our scholars are decreasing in numbers from year to year. On the contrary it will be seen that there has been an increase of forty-five since 1885, and that there are thirteen scholars more reported for 1889 than for 1888. The fact is our scholars are not scattered through the town as formerly. During the year now closing 200 of our 262 scholars were in four schools.

The attendance on the winter term of schools was very irregular owing to the prevalent illness, and so the average attendance for the year fell below that of several previous years, while really it had been higher than usual for the summer and fall terms.

Only female teachers have been employed.

Two schools had the same teachers for the entire year. Two other schools the same teachers for two terms. The illness of Miss Chamberlain, and the employment of the Misses Adams by the trustees of the Conant school made it necessary to put more new teachers into the schools than have ordinarily been put in during a single year.

At the beginning of the year Miss Crombie, teacher in the Primary Department of No. 2 since 1882, gave up her position much to the regret, yet with the full approval of the School Board, to take other work with better pay. Miss Crombie had proved herself a most efficient teacher, keeping the school up to the high level it attained under Miss Robbins. The School Board was fortunate enough to secure Miss Georgia A. Bigelow for the place thus left vacant. Of whose work it is sufficient to say that it will not suffer in comparison with that of Miss Robbins and Miss Crombie.

There were eighty different scholars in this school during the year, necessitating the employment of an assistant teacher for a part of the time. Miss Lucia Cutter, a pupil in the Conant school, as assistant did good, faithful work, showing her fitness to take the entire charge of a school. For want of a better room the entry was used for the assistant teacher's recitations. This being the entrance through which scholars are constantly passing to both school-rooms, the only place where overshoes, outside clothing and the like can be left, narrow, dimly lighted, and without ventilation is utterly unfit for the purpose to which it has been put. The present school-building barely suffices for the Primary and Grammar schools. The bringing the Conant school into the building every other year crowds the several departments, keeps them from being properly graded, and so prevents either Primary, Grammar or Conant school from being what it ought or would be with suitable accommodations. As good a room for the Conant school every year, as there is the year it is at the Centre of the town, would go far towards helping the School Board to so arrange the common schools that they shall furnish well trained pupils, and those who can be easily classified in that school. High praise is to be accorded to all the teachers in the schools of No. 2 which have had about one half of the scholars in town. It is not easy to see, under the circumstances, how these teachers could have done better work.

School house No. 3 has been painted outside and inside. A new and commodious house for No. 8, now the third school in number of pupils, obviates a difficulty long felt by those having to do with that school. School house No. 7 needs new seats. No. 9 new floor, seats and some other repairs. All our scholars have had opportunity for systematic instruction in music from Mrs. Mead, who went to the different schools once each week during the summer and fall terms. Such instruction for the pupils your committee has long had in mind, but for lack of money or want of teacher has not been able to secure at an earlier time. Mrs. Mead did excellent work and in every respect the result was highly satisfactory.

As questions are frequently asked in reference to the law providing free text-books, the law is here given in full.

Sec. 1. The school committee of every city and town shall purchase, at the expense of such city or town, text-books and other supplies used in the public schools; and said text-books and supplies shall be loaned to the pupils of said public schools free of charge, subject to such rules and regulations as to care and custody as the school committee may prescribe; provided that in purchasing the first supply of text-books under this act the school committee may effect a change in the text-books previously and then in use upon any subject.

Sec. 2. Pupils supplied with text-books at the time of the passage of this act shall not be supplied with similar books by the committee until needed.

Sec. 3. This act shall take effect upon the first day of January, eighteen hundred and ninety.

The members of the School Board have labored as best they could to make our schools what they believe such schools should be. They hope something has been done towards this end. They know, however, as those less familiar with the schools can not know what yet remains to be done. While they have not acted on the principle that the teacher alone can make a good school, they have yet firmly held that the teacher is the great factor in a good school, and that the teacher is to do something more than merely to impart knowledge, important as that may be. To our teachers they commend the following extract from the writings of one of the most successful instructors of the present day, with the hope they will strive to be the ideal teachers who know

"That the riches of the commonwealth
Are free, strong minds and hearts of health,
And more to her than gold or grain
The cunning hand and cultured brain."

And knowing show this knowledge in all they do before their pupils.

"Bear in mind that the chief work of the school-teacher is that of character building. The pupils committed to you are not so many pitchers to be filled with learning: they are moral beings to be trained for life's duties. The knowledge which you impart to them is valuable chiefly as an instrument in developing their intellectual and moral power. It is of much less consequence to them and to the world what they learn, than it is what they become. They are intrusted to you not so much that they may be taught a s that they may be trained. In after life they will make very little use of the particular facts which they learn from you, but they will be called upon every day that they live to make constant use of the mental powers that have been developed through your agency. Their ability to discharge the duties that may devolve upon them in the various positions that they may be called upon to fill will depend far less upon their knowledge than upon their character. Their own personal well-being, their enjoyment of the blessings of life, their appreciation of the possibilities of living, their power to resist temptation, ability to cope with evil, susceptibility to influences for good, will result not so much from their knowledge as from their moral discipline. To many a school boy and girl the teacher is more a model of imitation and an authority to be obeyed than is father or mother. The chief factor in this great work of character building is your own personality. The fountain does not rise higher than its source. What you say will be conditioned all the while by what you are. The children with whom you deal, whose characters you attempt to fashion, are keen observers of human nature, and should your own character not correspond with your precepts, they will be quick to discern it. They are quicker to imitate example than to obey rules."
